Long Islanders will benefit from the $5.7million NYS grant which will fund addiction prevention, treatment, and recovery!

The Long Island Network, comprising 12 human service and behavioral health organizations from Nassau and Suffolk Counties, has been awarded a New York State (NYS) grant in support of addiction prevention, treatment, and recovery programs. "Working together under this unified grant helps our network of agencies provide a wider selection of services for those most vulnerable," said Karen Boorshtein, President and CEO of FSL and lead applicant for the Long Island Network. "Each of the organizations will be able to increase programs for those struggling with the many challenges associated with addiction. Our goal is to empower people, and their families, throughout the recovery process."

The Long Island Network is a regional association of Advanced Health Network and Recovery Health Solutions (AHN-RHS), which consists of 50 NYS Office of Mental Health (OMH) and Office of Addiction Services and Supports (OASAS) licensed agencies. Carol Cassell, Executive Director stated that, "AHN/RHS is pleased to support the Long Island Network in its ongoing implementation of a seamless delivery system through collaborative community partnerships furthering evidence-based best practices in neighborhood programs along with data analytics and quality measurement."

This innovative award is part of the federally supported NYS Opioid Response Grant administered by the NYS OASAS.

FSL will be expanding both Prevention and Treatment Programs. FSL's DASH team and hotline 631-952-3333 are available 24/7 for those facing an addiction or mental health crisis.
